

People can size you up in mere seconds.

Hello.

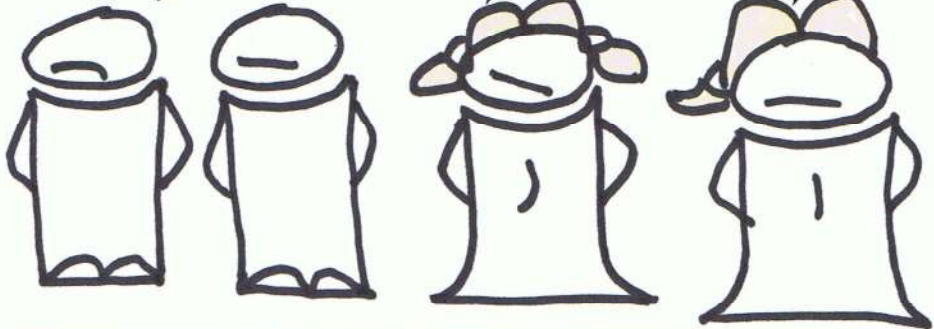

..03 ..02 ..01

Doesn't seem like our type.

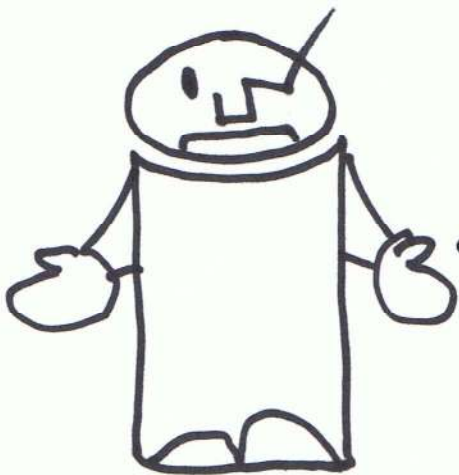

Seems weird.

Cute but...

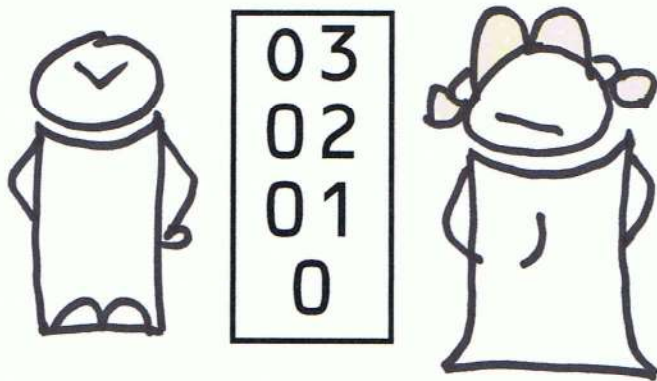

It is hard to meet people to make friends, get dates, or convince customers about your product when you only have seconds to make an impression.

What if you need to communicate more information about yourself than a few seconds allow for people to understand you?

I'm Cool.

How do you make the most out of what little time you have of someone's attention?

You would need a way to quickly summarize all the important things that you want people to know about you into snippets.

I'm a writer
I'm single
I have a job
I have 2 kids

SNIPPETS

But how do you tell people about you in snippets?

You would need a system.

Luckily, today there is a system for communicating all the important information about yourself into snippets!

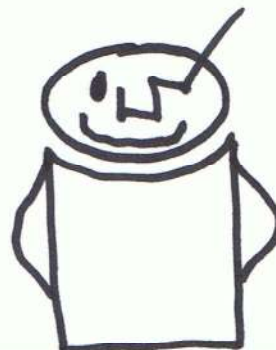

Allow us to introduce you to Inacronyms...

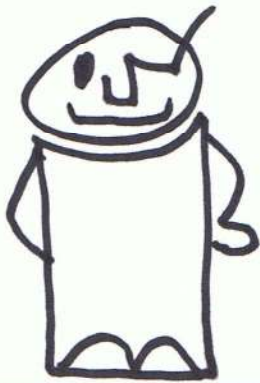

Cool!
How do you say it again?

Pronounced "In - Ackrow - Nimz"

Ok, I can say it now.

Inacronyms are a universal language using symbols to describe yourself to others.

Hmm...

Inacronyms take snippets of information and communicate a lot of details to people quickly and efficiently.

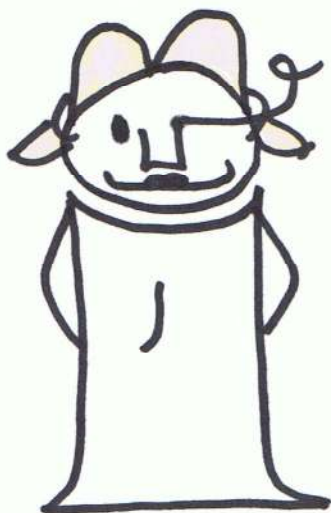

Let's take a look at some examples. Suppose you are a single person with no kids and you are under 40 years old. You can quickly and easily communicate that information using inacronyms as follows:

☐
<XL
-k⁰

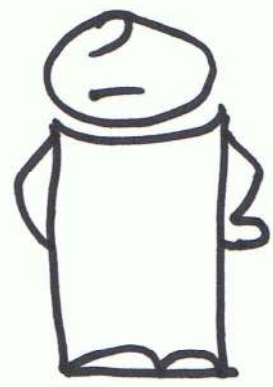

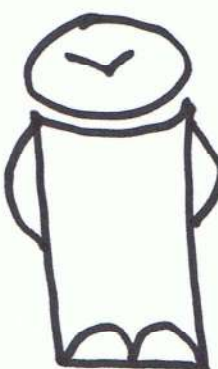

Wow cool!

You have now communicated a lot of information about yourself in symbolic snippet form quickly and easily.

Inacronyms

Wow, she looks good for her age!

What if you wanted to say you have a college degree? Or that you have a sarcastic sense of humor? Or that you have a job?

Can you do that with Inacronyms? YES!

So, you can see that inacronyms say a lot about you in a very small space quickly.

But how do you communicate with people using inacronyms?

It is simple. You use what we call a VIPA. A Visual Interpersonal Advertisement.

VIPA

A VIPA is a data totem pole that contains 4 inacronyms.

Let's use the examples we just talked about and put them in VIPA form.

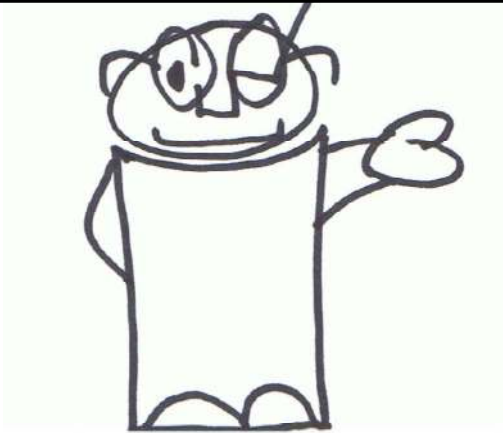

With a VIPA, you take 4 inacronyms and stack them on top of each other in a data totem pole. You can then quickly advertise a lot of information to people in seconds.

You can create your VIPA for free at inacronym.com today!

I love it, but I have more questions.

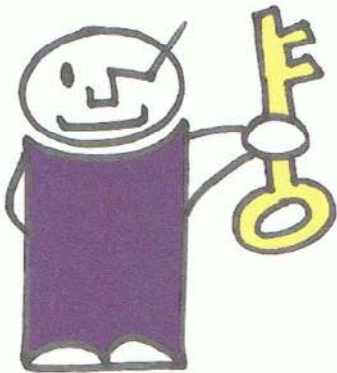

How do other people know what the inacronyms mean?

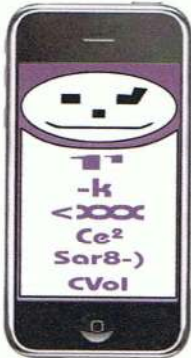

Good question.

That's easy. We give the key away for free at Inacronym.com.
It's called the InacroKey.

You can access the InacroKey any time you want from the internet on your computer or mobile phone.

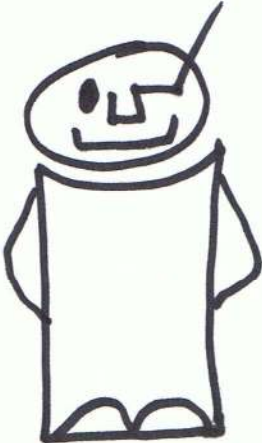

Most inacronyms are self explanatory and learned fast. So you won't need the key for long.

It's easy as pie!

Is there an inacronym for saying I'm a surfer?

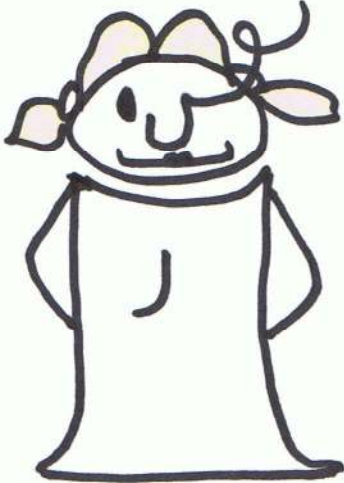

Yes.

Is there an inacronym for saying I like tea?

Yes.

There are hundreds of inacronyms and we are making new ones all the time!

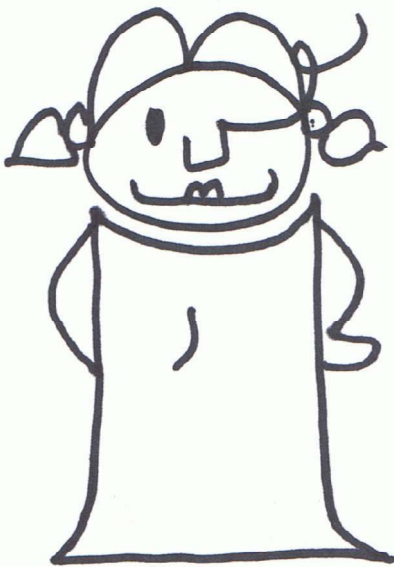

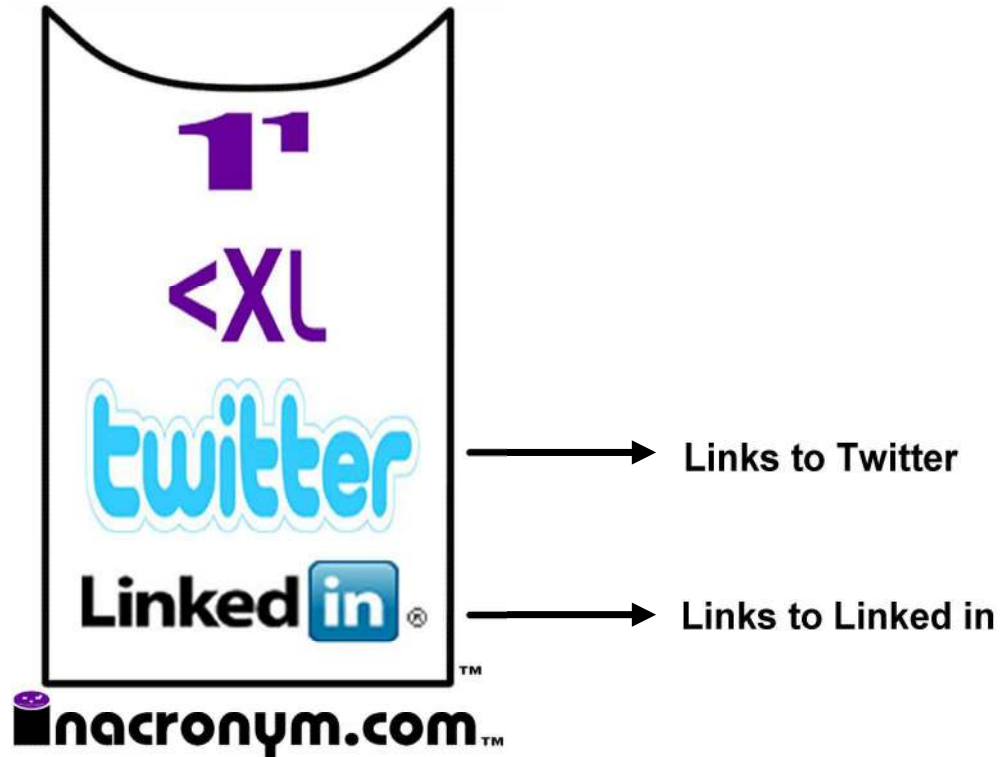

Way cool!

Chances are good there is an inacronym to say most things you want to advertise.

Let's take it a step further. Maybe you want to communicate that you are on Twitter, Linked in, and Facebook. How would you do this?
Easy: You can simply select the inacronyms that represent those sites and put them on your VIPA.

So what can I do with my VIPAs?

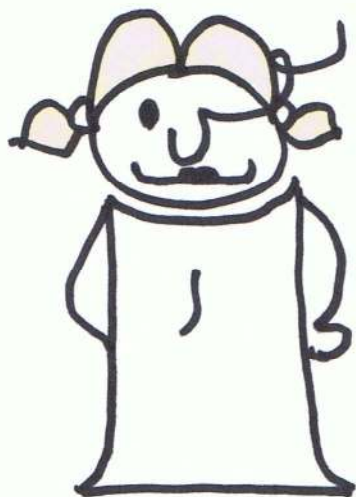

Tell existing friends how to get all your information in one spot using your VIPAs!

- VIPA on inacronym.com
- Put your VIPA on Facebook
- Put your VIPA on your blog
- Put your VIPA in an email signature

Cool. I have so many places on the net.
